

National Economic and Technological Development Zones

The Economic Technological Development Zones (ETDZ) constitutes part of China's policy of Opening up to the outside world. By carving up a relatively small piece of land in the open city and building perfect infrastructures in this locality, an investment surrounding conforming to international standards will be created. By way of absorbing and taking advantage of foreign capital, the modernized industrial configuration with new, and high technology as its mainstay will eventually take shape and become the essential territory in developing foreign economic and trade in the local urban and it surrounding areas. Up to the present, there are State Council approved ETDZs. (Including several economic areas such as Shanghai Lujiazui Finance and Trade Zone, Suzhou Industrial Park, Shanghai Pudong Jinqiao Export Processing Zone, Ningbo Daxie Development Zone, Xiamen Haicang Investment Zone and Yangpu Development Zone. The open policies are also carried out in the above named zones.)

National Boarder and Economic Cooperation

For the open cities along the border, the National Boarder and Economic Cooperation Zone is the area to develop frontier trade and carry out processing for re-export. Opening to the outside world along the border areas in China's central and western parts is our important policy to develop trade, economy and good-neighbour relationship with the surrounding countries. It also plays positive roles in flourishing the economy of the national minority areas. The State Council has approved 14 BECZs since 1992.

National Export Processing Zones

Based on a thorough investigation in the practice of the developed countries in management of processing trade, the State Council selected and approved 15 cities such as Guangzhou, Beijing and Dalian to pilot enclosed management schemes over export processing zones or EPZ in April 2000. The EPZ is intended to be a special enclosed area supervised by the Customs. As a matter of fact, the establishment of EPZ is one of the major steps taken by China to expand its involvement in the international market and further open its market to the outside world. It is most helpful in the promotion of export, improvement in the management of processing trade, utilization of foreign capital in a more active, practical, and effective way, and development of the local economy.

National Tourist and Holiday Resort

In order to further open its market to the outside world, exploit rich tourist resources and speed up the tourist industry, the State Council decided to choose the regions with ripe conditions as National Holiday and Tourist resort, where the enterprises and the tourist equipment and projects invested by foreign businessmen are encouraged. To date, there are 11 national holiday and tourist resorts by the approval of the State Council.
